Under no circumstances should the DOJ settle with Microsoft in any way which would allow them to increase their market share. This would certainly include any proposals which would create a government "sanction" in allowing them to dramatically increase marketshare in areas where they are historically not the dominant player. In specific, direct grants of software/hardware systems to K-12 and higher education institutions would help them increase marketshare in an area where use of other operating systems (mainly Macintosh and Linux) have a dominant role.
